The Whales Arrive!

We live in Hawaii. This morning I walked down to the beach to see the sun rise.

Suddenly, a humpback whale rose up out of the water. It was so close to shore, I could see its giant eyeball looking at me! Humpbacks eat krill and small fish in the summer up North in cold polar waters. In the winter they migrate South to Hawaii to find their mates and give birth in the warm tropical waters.

Little Penguin's Tale

In my book, Little Penguin's Tale, seven little penguins snuggle together in a cozy huddle as their Grand Nanny Penguin tells them a story of long, long ago. "Once there was a little penguin, just like you, she begins. "Just like you – except he didn't listen to his Grand Nanny's tales."

But wait! One of the seven little penguins isn't listening either. Just like the penguin of long ago, he's sneaking away into the snowy polar world to have some fun – and to experience the very same fun adventures that Grand Nanny Penguin describes in her exciting tale
